WOMAN'S QUICK THINKING SAVES TWO FROM FIRE

Makes Improvised Rope of Bed Sheet When Famous Old Landmark Burns.

(SPECIAL TO THE TELEGRAM)

ELKINS, Sept. 2.—Only the rare presence of mind displayed by Mrs. J. W. Vannetta saved her life and that of her aged father-in-law, "Grandpa" Reuben Vennetta, when at 4 o'clock this morning when their home was burned as the result of fire of unknown origin. When Mrs. Vannetta was awakened by the fire the entire down stairs was a seething mass of flames, and escape by the stairway was out of the question. Awakening her father-in-law with difficulty Mrs. Vannetta quickly tied a bed sheet around his waist and lowered him to the ground. Fastening the sheet to a banister she effected her own escape in the same manner just before the floor fell in.

The burned house, known far and wide as "the calico house" because of the fantastic colors in which it was painted by a former owner many years ago, was nearly one hundred years old, having been built by the late Adam Mousse. It was located at Leadenville, on the Fairmont and Beverly turnpike, and was a landmark for travelers long before the city of Elkins was ever thought of. Surrounded by a clump of stately pines, "the calico house" always attracted the attention of passersby. It was originally constructed of huge pine logs, and was later ceiled and weatherboarded with boards. Some years ago the property was purchased by J. H. Hartley, who later sold it to W. S. Kidd, of Clarksburg. Recently it had been occupied by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Vannetta and little daughter and Mr. Vannetta's father, Reuben Vannetta. The younger Vannetta is now employed at Canisteo, N. Y.

The house was outside the water system, but could not have been saved by the fire department in any event, as the walls were falling in when the chemical engine reached the scene.

ROOSEVELT TO STUMP WEST THIS MONTH

Will Campaign Illinois and the West for Hughes and Fairbanks.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—Theodore Roosevelt will campaign Illinois and the West for Hughes and Fairbanks, and Albert J. Beveridge, of Indiana, will make the speech in the auditorium October 5, shooting the lid off the Republican campaign in Illinois. Western Manager Alvin T. Hert brought back the T. R. tidings from New York, and State Chairman Fred E. Sterling made the announcement regarding former Senator Beveridge late in September.

This bristling news started joy radiating through Republican political circles and did much to push away some gloom clouds, caused by pessimistic reports industriously circulated as to conditions in the West.

Colonel Roosevelt's dates have not been set, even tentatively, and no conditional schedule has been made for him. He made his first speech in behalf of the Republican nominees last week in Maine, and he will reach the Mississippi valley probably late in September.

Beveridge Sends Acceptance.

Former Senator Beveridge sent an enthusiastic acceptance from Indianapolis to the invitation to come to Chicago, sent by State Chairman Sterling backed up by the western national headquarters and by the Republican county organization of Cook county.

"I will be very glad to make my first speech for the Republican national ticket in Chicago," Mr. Beveridge telegraphed.

Mr. Beveridge was the Progressive nominee for United States senator in Indiana in 1914, and the man who placed the name of Theodore Roosevelt in nomination for the presidency at the Progressive national convention of 1912. After the nomination of Hughes he issued a statement offering full breast support to the Republican
